

Photos: Dan Jaffe

WOODLAND STONECROP

Sedum ternatum

This low-growing, trailing ground cover has fleshy succulent-like leaves which appear in whorls of three. Spreads easily through plantlets that drop and root. Easy to maintain once established. Produces small, white star-like flowers. A beautiful addition to a shade or rock garden!

Growing Information

Sunlight Part shade
Soil Type Moist, well-drained, limey
Height 0–1'
Flowering calendar April, May, June

Benefits for Wildlife

Leaves
Flowers Yes
Fruit
Seeds
Host to caterpillar species
(common names): Brown Elfin; Yellowstriped Armyworm Moth; Omnivorous Leafroller Moth; Filament Bearer

Benefits for People

- Deer, rabbit, and drought tolerant

Natural Habitat

- Woody stream banks
- Rocky slopes

